

THE DEATH OF HARRISON.

What! soar'd the old eagle to die at the sun!
Lies he stiff with spread wings at the planet of even.
Are there spirits, more blest than the planet of even,
Who mount to their zenith, then melt into Heaven—
No waning of fire, no quenching of ray,
But rising, still rising, when passing away!
Farewell, gallant eagle! thou art buried in light!
God speed unto Heaven, lost star of our night!

Death! Death in the White House! Ah, never before
Trod his skeleton foot on the President's floor!
He is looked for in hovel, and dreading in hall—
The king in his closet keeps hatchment and pall—
The youth in his birth-place, the old man at home,
Make clasp from the door-stone the path to the tomb;
But the lord of this mansion was cradled not here—
In a church-yard far off stands his beckoning bier—
He is here as the wave-crest heaves flashing on high—
As the arrow is stopp'd by its prize in the sky—
The arrow to earth, and the foam to the shore—
Death finds them when swift and sparkling are o'er—
But Harrison's death fits the climax of story—
He went with his old stride—from glory to glory!

Lay his sword on his breast! There's no spot on his blade
In whose cankerous breath his bright laurels will fade—
'Twas the first to lead on at humanity's call—
It was stayed with sweet mercy when 'glory' was all!
As calm in the council as gallant in war,
He fought for his country and not its 'horror'!
In the path of the hero with pity he trod—
Let him pass with his sword to the presence of God!

What more! Shall we on, with his ashes? Yet, stay!
He hath ruled the wide realm of a king in his day!
At his word, like a monarch's, went treasure and land—
The bright gold of thousands has passed thro' his hand—
Is there nothing to show of his glittering hoard?
No jewel to deck the rude hill of his sword?
No trappings? No horses?—what had he, but now?
On! on with his ashes!—he left but his plough!
Brave old Cincinnati! Unwind 'y's sheet!
Let him sleep as he lived—with his purse at his feet!

Follow now as ye list! The first mourner to-day
Is this nation, whose father is taken away!
Wife, children and neighbor may mourn at his knell—
He was 'lover and friend' to his country as well!
For the stars on our banner, grown suddenly dim,
Let us weep, in our darkness—but weep not for him!
Not for him—who, departing, leaves millions in tears!
Not for him—who has died full of honor and years!
Not for him—who ascended Fame's ladder so high!
From the round at the top he has stepped to the sky!
It is blessed to go when so ready to die!

O'CONNELL, GENIUS.—The Morning Herald thus predicts
the approaching fall of the great 'talking potter.' "Mr.
O'Connell has almost ceased to be dangerous—he is only noisy. He has of late made his genius too cheap—With an inimitable faculty for lying, he has lately wanted due judgment to regulate his powers. Had the girl in the fairy tale who talked pearls and diamonds, made a four hours' speech once a day, pearls and diamonds would have been cheap as cinders. In the like manner, Mr. O'Connell, to whom lies were things of precious price, so long as he confined himself to a moderate issue, has of late so glutted the market with the commodity, that nobody will venture his credit upon it.
There can be no doubt that the genius of the member for Dublin is unimpaired—that he is still equal to his worst days —that his lips can drop poison or butter-milk at the shortest notice on the same subject—that to the wit of Thersites he still unites the courage of Pistols; all the qualities save one which have raised him to the present pillory eminence, are yet manifested in the daily life of Mr. O'Connell: one essential virtue is, however, lost to him—judgment! He lies, and cants, and abuses, and cajoles, with a shortness of memory smacking of extreme old age. The lies themselves are,
we repeat, just as good as ever;

'Age cannot wither them, nor custom stale
Their infinite variety.'
Satan himself must blush—redoubtful sleep, at the hopelessness of successful rivalry with the member for Dublin, in the art of what may be termed, ornamental speaking. But Mr. O'Connell has of late been a spendthrift of his genius; he has made lies so common that his hearers have begun to yearn for a bit of truth, if only by the way of change.

PRE-EXISTENCE.—The following allusion by Baron Smith to one of those extraordinary sensations on whose existence Plato grounded his beautiful phantasy, that all knowledge is only remembrance, is at once elegant and impressive:
"In connexion with the phenomena of memory, may I be permitted to take notice of a certain mystery or marvel which has occasionally presented itself to me, and in voucher of the existence of which I have the experience of others, in addition to my own? I mean that strange impression which will occasionally come with unexpected suddenness on the mind that the scene now passing, and in which we share, is one which, in the very place, and in the very words, with the same persons, and with the same feelings, we had accurately rehearsed, we know not where, before. It is the most extraordinary of sensations, and is one which will occur where, in what is going forward, there is nothing remarkable or of particular interest involved. While we speak, our former words are ringing in our ears, and the sentences which we form are the faint echoes of a conversation had in olden time.
Our conscious thoughts, too, as they rise, seem to whisper to each other that this is not their first appearance in this place.
In short, all that is now before us seems the appropriation of a dialogue long departed—the spectral resurrection of scenes and transactions long gone by. Or we may be said, by the momentary gleam of a flash of reminiscence, to be witnessing,
in a mysterious mirror, the dark reflections of times past,
and living, over, in minute and shadowy detail, a duplicate of the incidents of pre-existent state."

THE DEAD.—There is something in the sight of a dead face which stirs the deepest feelings of the human heart. It is not easy to analyze this sentiment. It has in it wonder, terror, curiosity and incredulity. It is a great—great—thing. No living tongue can say so much as those closed, pale, ice-cold lips—and they have smiled, jested, commanded.
Light-words have fallen from them!

SAMUEL W. BENEDICT, Watch Maker, Merchants'
Exchange, corner of Wall and William streets, having formed connections in business with S. HAMMOND, their personal attention will be given to repairing the Watches. The most complicated parts of Duplex and Chronometer Watches put in equal to the original.
